There it was! The most beautiful bicycle she could ever have imagined! She ran to it, stoking its shiny chrome and running her fingers through the colorful streamers that flowed from its handle grips. Never could there be a more perfect bike than this one. She clapped her hands with the pure delight of it.

Then she reached for the price tag.

The next moment, the sunshine in the little girl's eyes had melted away into tears. "Oh, Daddy," she wept. "I'll never have enough. Never." She threw herself into his arms. With over 300,000 copies in print, Believing Christ has become a classic in religious literature. The tender and heartwarming Parable of the Bicycle, which is at the heart of that book, has helped literally hundreds of thousands understand more fully how we are saved and appreciate the debt each of us owes Christ. Now, Stephen E. Robinson's beloved parable is retold with the help of Ben Sowards's glowing illustrations. Readers of all ages will love this new picture book that again shares the good news of the gospel – that is, although we can never pay the price of admission into the kingdom of God, "Christ is the answer. He knows the worth of a soul is priceless. He is the bridge from here to there. He is our hope when we feel cut off and alone. He is our Savior." Parents, church leaders, and youth will welcome this simple yet profound explanation of how redemption works and its powerful affirmation of the grace of Christ.
