In 2008, Google released a comic book talking about something radically different: a new browser built from the ground up with new technologies to work with the web applications which were becoming commonplace. When it was first released, Chrome was a big deal. It was a different beast to the other browsers: it focused on browsing - it got out of your way and let you look at the webpage. If you didn't know what you were looking for, it made it really easy for you to explore while remaining as unobtrusive as possible.

We're four years on now, and Chrome is better than ever. Other browsers have improved too, but Chrome is still arguably the best web browser out there for... well... browsing!
